CHSA Impacts National Legislation

Remembering 1882 inspires US Congress & Senate

CHSA acknowledges House Resolution 282 and Senate Resolution 201, as introduced by Congress on May 26, 2011 expressing regret for the passage of discriminatory laws that restricted the civil rights of Chinese immigrants. The resolutions reaffirm Congress's commitment to protecting the civil rights of all people, regardless of race, and ethnicity.

U.S. Representatives Judy Chu (D-CA), Judy Biggert (R-IL), Mike Coffman (R-CO), and Dana Rohrabacher (R-CA) introduced H. Res. 282 while Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA) put forward S. Res. 201, as co-sponsored by Senator Scott Brown (R-MA).

In introducing the resolution, Senator Feinstein remarked: “The enactment of Chinese exclusionary laws is a shameful part of our history that must not be forgotten. I hope this resolution will serve to enlighten those who may not be aware of this regrettable chapter in our history, and bring closure to the families whose loved ones lived through this difficult time. Despite these hardships, Chinese immigrants persevered, and they continue to make invaluable contributions to the development and success of our country.”

CHSA's Remembering 1882 exhibit explores the historical debate around the Exclusion Act from its origins through its full repeal in 1968, the civil rights struggle of Chinese Americans and allies, and the historic importance of habeas corpus in the Chinese American community.

Drawn from photographs, newspaper commentaries, political cartoons, and other objects in CHSA's collections, the Remembering 1882 exhibit showcases the passion and poignancy of this dramatic chapter in American history. Launched in San Francisco, the exhibit travels throughout the United States to civic institutions and community organizations.

The CHSA Museum is proud to have developed the Remembering 1882 in 2007. Since then, the exhibit has impacted legislation on a nationwide level and also toured the country in col-

“The Remembering 1882 exhibit has had and continues to have a significant impact educating the public about the Chinese Exclusion Laws. The House and Senate resolutions were direct results of efforts . . . after reviewing a public display of Remembering 1882 in Washington DC.”

Finding Jake Lee Exhibit Opening

The series of Jake Lee paintings that once hung in Kans Restaurant are currently displayed in CHSA's Yick Gallery.

Following the opening of Finding Jake Lee: The Paintings at Kan’s earlier this year, CHSA received much press coverage in national & local media, including: New York Times, San Francisco Bay Citizen, SF Weekly, San Jose Mercury News, Sing Tao, & World Journal, NBC-TV, KCBS-TV, KTSF, and Comcast Newsmakers.

The exhibit has been an astounding success, with increased visitors to the museum, plus many other Jake Lee watercolors donated to CHSA.

May Louie generously donated rare private paintings by the artist, such as the "Wizard of Oz," "Men on Horses," “Saints Peter & Paul Church,” “Shang Dynasty Wine,” “Shang Dynasty Horses,” “Rhinoceros Wine Vessel,” “On Lee Grocery.”

Linda Sorensen & Daniel Rohlfing also contributed a framed watercolor of "Hummingbirds" while Tom & Jeannette Hsieh loaned "China-town Rooftops" to the museum.

CHSA on Groupon & Local Deals & Google Offers

In 2011, CHSA has expanded its boundaries for greater outreach of membership and events into social media realms with promotions on Groupon, Facebook Deals, Google Offers, and The Bay Citizen’s "Citizen Deals."

Through Groupon alone, a couple hundred new members were added in February, lured by the enticing copy about CHSA.

Without history museums, the study of the past would be relegated to musty shoe-box dioramas and the Internet’s teeming archive of cat videos. Browse cultural history with a one-year contributing membership to the CHSA.

Founded in 1963, the Chinese Historical Society houses a remarkable array of cultural and historical artifacts, providing Chinese-Americans and generally hungry-brained humans an opportunity to explore a rich cultural legacy. A year-long contributing membership to the society nets unlimited admission to the museum for up to two adults and two children and/or grandchildren, two additional guest passes, a 10% discount at the museum bookstore, a subscription to the Bulletin newsletter, the ability to fly through spread toes, and invitations to members-only events.

The museum’s collection includes enlightening heirlooms such as Frank Wong’s miniature Chinatown scenes and James Leong’s mural of regional Chinese-American history. Finding Jake Lee is among the fresh-faced exhibits, providing an overview of the titular water-colorer’s region-focused imagery. The museum’s Julia Morgan-designed building is itself a work of historic merit, blending Chinese and Western elements into an aesthetically pleasing casing.
Come Visit a Revived CHSA Museum!

Throughout the course of the past year, CHSA has been making continual changes and improvements in the Museum with the expertise of award-winning museum & exhibit designer Gordon Chun.

In the main gallery, new items have been added in the section about China Trade for increased visibility and further interpretation. New labels in both Chinese and English have also been added to give background information about the U.S.’s initial participation in the China Trade. Flip boards in the Americana area invite visitors to learn what is considered Chinese or Chinese American.

An interactive feature to the suitcase section has also been added. One of the suitcases is open and displays replicas of items that a Chinese labor at the time probably had—encouraging visitors to touch the items and think about what they would have brought if they were traveling under similar circumstances. Below the census map, visitors are also asked to interact with the exhibit by inserting buttons into the slot of when their families immigrated to the U.S.

Under the Transcontinental Railroad section, Gordon has added a photograph, a new coat of paint, as well as a bilingual label depicting the completion of the railroad. Furthermore, the railroad piece can now be lifted from the platform for increased visitor participation.

As visitors enter through the main lobby, they will also notice more lighting, larger and clearer labels, and a decorative lion’s head—making the Museum more welcoming. All directional signs are now bilingual and the “In Search of Roots 2011” exhibit is also set in the main hall way.

In the wings of the museum, the Choy Gallery has been transformed into a more living room-like space where visitors and their families can learn about CHSA as an institution. Real-life objects and publications depicting the history of CHSA and San Francisco Chinatown are on display.

Entering the Y Room: the Julia Morgan panel now resides here, as well as her drawings of the Chinese YWCA. The relationship between CHSA, YWCA, and Julia Morgan is now also more obvious to the first-time visitor. The room will focus on the world-renowned architect and the women who were involved with establishing the Chinese YWCA in the early 1900s.

This summer, in Astoria, Oregon, Remembering 1882 exhibit will be showcased during the city’s bicentennial celebration. In honor of the city’s 200th anniversary, they are building and dedicating the Garden of the Surging Waves, complete with sculptures made by a Chinese artist—all to commemorate Chinese laborers who helped build the city with the introduction of the railroad, building of the wharves that were home to a fishing industry, and a flourishing international trade, and many other things the Chinese did before they all left as a result of the Chinese Exclusion Acts. Remembering 1882 will be on display in Astoria until October 1, 2011.

“The Remembering 1882 exhibit has had and continues to have a significant impact educating the public about the Chinese Exclusion Laws. The House and Senate resolutions were direct results of efforts made by a coalition of national organizations brought together because members had sought each other out after reviewing a public display of Remembering 1882 in Washington DC,” Ted Gong, Co-Chair of the 1882 Project, said.

ABOUT THE 1882 PROJECT

The 1882 Project is a nonpartisan, grassroots effort focused on the impact the Chinese Exclusion Laws and such legislation had on our history. The 1882 Project aims to work with Congress to pass resolutions expressing regret for the passage of these laws, and to increase national awareness of the laws. Several national civil rights organizations spearhead the 1882 Project: the Chinese American Citizens Alliance, the Committee of 100, the National Council of Chinese Americans, and OCA. Sun Yat-sen and the Three People’s Principles
A new History Alive! program debuting this Fall

Featuring the unique story of Dr. Sun’s life in America before returning to be the first provisional President of the Republic of China, Dr. Sun is a Chautauquan museum theater presentation by renowned writer, historian and performer, CHSA Artist-in-Residence Charlie Chin.

This project will illuminate the linkage between the modern history of China with the history of Chinese American communities as well as the commonality between the democratic ideas pursued in the post American Civil War era and the aspirations of Chinese both in China and here in America.

The performance will educate younger generations and the public at large about the place of Chinatown in history as well as the roots of the complex relationship between US and China that continues today. By upholding the achievements of the past, it creates the foundation for the future of the community.

Dr. Sun is considered the founding father of modern China. He was born Hakka in Guangdong, and an older brother, who had become a merchant in Hawaii, arranged for him to go to the Iolani School in Hawaii. There he became deeply impacted by the writing and words of both Alexander Hamilton and Abraham Lincoln, later basing his Three Principles on Lincoln’s words, “a government of the people, by the people, and for the people.”

His interpretation was the Three People’s Principles: Nationalism (China should be ruled by Chinese), Democracy, (the people should choose their leaders), and Equalization (proper distribution of the country’s wealth). Because he advocated the overthrow of the Qing Dynasty, and because he proposed the founding of a Republic of China, the Qing Dynasty put a price on his head and he spent 16 years in exile in the United States, Canada, Japan, and Britain.

While in exile, he repeatedly spoke about his dream of a Chinese Democracy wherever he went. He spoke often in Chinese American communities. Thousands of Chinese men, who had been forced to leave China because of the poverty, oppression, natural disasters, corruption, and mismanagement of the Qing Dynasty, after attending one of his speeches willingly gave Dr. Sun their life savings to support the founding of a Chinese Democracy. He referred to these Overseas Chinese as the “Mother of the Revolution.”

While in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco, he stayed with friends at their homes and at the headquarters of organizations that supported his proposals.

As a child and teenager in the 1940s and 1950s, Charlie Chin listened to Chinatown seniors whose eyewitness accounts, anecdotes, and legends about Dr. Sun were repeated and passed on to another generation.

“Soliloquy of a Young Artist” A special History Alive! performance portraying the artistry of Jake Lee

Inspired by the Jake Lee paintings, CHSA is presenting the first public performance of Soliloquy of a Young Artist on Saturday, August 13, 2011 at 1 pm. A brief preview of the performance follows:

To be or not to be. Isn’t that how it goes?
To be an artist or not to be an artist.
I ask the question, and I know the answer.
Jake Lee is my teacher, my mentor, and he says I’m an artist.

Painting is all I know. I went straight from Galileo

Painting is all I know. I went straight from Galileo
High in San Francisco to the Art Institute in L.A. My parents didn’t stop me. They have a son, the engineer, and a son, the doctor.

My master accepts a commission from a restaurant owner—Johnny Kan in San Francisco—makes a deal to paint scenes about Chinese people in the pioneer days Jake goes and studies up on the gold rush days and railroading and farming, you know, HISTORY. This goes on for a year before he even puts brush to canvas.”

“Soliloquy of a Young Artist” will be performed by Jaemyong “Jay” Lee, of Saratoga High School. Jay played the lead in Jekyll and Hyde, a musical play performed at Saratoga High School Theatre this spring. He also portrayed Sgt. Sing Kee, WWI hero for Heritage Day in Saratoga, May 20, 2011.

CHSA Executive Director will offer remarks on the recovery story of the Jake Lee paintings in advance of the soliloquy.

This event is free with admission to the CHSA Museum. Please call (415)391-1188 x101 or email info@chsa.org to RSVP or with any questions.

Presenting “Reflections” by Lenora Lee Dance

Reflections, the new interdisciplinary work by Lenora Lee Dance, will be performed at CounterPULSE in SF from September 8-11, 2011.

The piece explores the experiences of creating community and a sense of place by succeeding generations in Lenora’s family and community, beginning with her grandfather, who immigrated through Angel Island in 1922. In honoring his efforts to achieve dignity and self-realization, Lenora also address today’s challenges for Chinese men facing assimilationist pressures in the mainstream American culture.

Lenora Lee Dance in collaboration with Kei Lun Martial Arts & Enshin Karate, South San Francisco Dojo. It features

media design by Olivia Ting music by Francis Wong, text by Genny Lim, and videography by Ben Estabrook.

Reflections is presented through the CounterPULSE Artist Residency Commissioning Program, in partnership with Asian Improv aRts, API Cultural Center, Chinese Historical Society of America Museum, & Angel Island Immigration Station Foundation.

CHSA recently began a project of digitizing its celebrated photography collection and posting it online to History Pin. History Pin is a global history project that allows you to compare historic photos to their modern day locations. While allowing you to explore the early days of Chinatown, this site also showcases neighborhood changes. Please check back often for new photos are regularly added.

History Pin has allowed the CHSA Museum to make available information that was previously only available to a select group of researchers. Sharing our vast photography collection and the stories captured in the images furthers our mission of presenting Chinese American history while promoting the contributions and legacy of Chinese America.

2011 Second Saturday Programs
Flourish at CHSA Museum

Throughout 2011, the second year of the Museum’s Second Saturday programs have flourished with a series of relevant events.

January began with Professor Mae Ngai’s “The Lucky Ones” Book Reading, moving into the exhibit opening of “Finding Jake Lee: The Painting at Kan’s” in February, and Artist Frank Wong’s presentations of his Miniature Chinatown Scenes in March.

Spring sprang in with Oliver Chin’s “Year of the Rat” reading for children in April followed by a sold-out walking tour in May by Artist-in-Residence Charlie Chin “From the Gold Rush to the Gilded Ghetto: 1850–1950, An SF Chinatown Restaurant.” Summer kicked off with an edifying “Empire of Silver”

Artist Frank Wong shared his Miniature Chinatown Scenes at CHSA’s Second Saturday Presentation in March 2011.

Film Presentation by Director Christine Yao in June and a “Conserving Jake Lee Art” Talk by Karen Zukor in July.
The CHSA Bulletin is published multiple times throughout the year. To contribute articles about Chinese American community and historical news and events, please submit articles to judy@chsa.org.
